

Fun Poems from Wales

Dylan Jones who has a poem in the Welsh issue of Agenda and also in the Welsh online supplement here.

Gardener

Each day I rise to murder the living;
with blade & knife and flaying yellow twine I march through continents of gardens creating a world in my own image.
Small, unseen things flee or are broken;
their unique world I tear apart unremittingly.
Are you needful?
Are nettles rising in rashes across heaped, unbroken wilderness?
Does the bramble push toward an unchallenged dominion?
Call me. Evenings are best.
The Slayer, The Impaler,
The Creator of Empires, Genghis of Suburbia.
The man who waits to satisfy your desire is daily for hire.

Redstart

Mr Quiver, Mr Foxtail, in black highwayman's mask edged in white – stand and deliver!

Fly-fishing on fence-posts, dashing under derelict eaves – your wife is the drab one she lacks your fizzle, your razzamatazz, your drama;

only the tails match.

Dapper Mr Slate-Back with your under-water whistle – wheet-wheet, whee-tic-tic

Buzzin Fly

How you talk!
The same phrase over & over no commas or stops - only the relief of altitude takes you away till your droning is only a hint bordering the silence.

Master of persistence – taming the relentless task round & round with no trace of being glum - if inks or smokes could trail you what crazy insistent spirographs you'd notch up – what remorseless tapestry of knots!
Buzzin fly- the only question is 'Why?'

Idris Caffrey's work appears in the Welsh issue of Agenda.

The Not So Obvious Welshman

I am an exile, speaking a foreign language in a strange country where I've found work.
I didn't take with me the tenor trills of a male voice choir or the skills of running with a ball.
I never mined the black seams or warned of hell from a dusty old pulpit.
I was never a farmer scratching away at the thin soil on the rolling hills.
But I am Welsh,
I am Welsh!
Cut me and see the poem running through my veins.

Eating Welsh Cakes in Newport

I sit on the cathedral wall staring out over the bay where the pale sun is playing games with the sea.

The city sprawls below me but it is not these scenes that fill my mind.
It is the Welsh cakes - shop-bought, dry and stale, nothing like I remember, the taste of so much that has changed

Marc Harris's work appears in the Welsh issue of Agenda.

The Winning Score

For Shane Williams

The wing's feet stitch a seam to the line – zip-fast, jinking run, linking unzipping the crowd who, shrouded in the flames of passion fashion a roaring pocket of sound.

Note: Shane Williams, a Welsh international winger, lit up the world of rugby union in 2008 when he was named International Rugby Board player of the year. Rugby Union is an intrinsic part of Welsh culture. He has become an icon of the sport.

The lines in the poem are written to mimic the mesmeric, sidestepping action Shane often displays when he scores a try.

John Barnie has three poems in the Welsh issue of Agenda.

About the Poet

Let's publish his leftovers, somebody said, and call it Gleanings; or Scrapings, said a second; what about Peelings, suggested a third, or Droppings; a thin book, like stragglers in the forest limping among trees after the Grand Army had passed banging its drums, leaving village ruins and old women in rutted country roads.

BAARRPP!

BAARRPP! goes the Patient Appointment board on the wall commanding Ieuan Evans to proceed to Doctor Griffiths, Room Eleven; BAARRPP! for Nia Morris; in between each call the board is blank as if contemplating darkness, or a message trickles across its brow D.o.n.'t. f.o.r.g.e.t. t.o. g.i.v.e. y.o.u.r. n.a.m.e...

BAARRPP! it wakes up with a jerk for Adam Connolly...; most look healthy, and that girl's pretty; but some may already harbour Dead Sea fruit within and will taste its ashes when the doctor reads from his on-screen notes;

BAARRPP! now it's me; my name in ruby dripping fire for all to see, as I lurch up quickly from my seat.

Duncan Bush has two poems in the Welsh issue of Agenda.

Men's Room

The beautiful stalls
And cubicles of the Los Angeles Public

Library (slabbed gray Marble, with good chrome fittings)
Bespeak not grandeur

But proletarian Worth, and date from an age when Knowledge could still be Found in books, and came A right. (Though why has no one Yet written a book

Or lapidary Monograph on Great Toilets
And Urinals? – Or,

Men's Lavatories
Of Europe and the U.S.: A Personal Guide?

If ever they do,
Those of the Los Angeles
Public Library

Should claim a place – with Tasteful full-colour plates
In illustration

Of the lovely light
That slants through the frosted glass
On mornings of heat

When it's cool in here
Among marble, porcelain And trickling water. . .)

West 86th Street

A style I've always Admired: that of elderly
Well-off Jewish men

Who live on New York's Upper West Side, near the Park,
In tall apartment

Buildings with doormen
And foyers and residents' Committees, and who

Wouldn't set a foot
On the sidewalk in winter
Without first donning

A good overcoat, Trilby, tasselled scarf, and Taking leather gloves

(one unworn, and gripped lightly in the other prior to pulling it on, urbane, urban - just pausing to assess the day, the street, the city).
